Book About:

In " Me and the willow tree", we see a complicated personality. This personality (man or woman) is unable to have a normal communication with others and therefore he/she goes under the shade of a willow tree in a park nearby to talk to it.

This tree is a place for narrator to sit and talk to a "fake companion". He/she talks to it about his/her dreams and things that make him/her unrest.

The narrator of the book says that all the people coming under the tree have no good memories of their past and they were depressed people when were talking under the tree. The same as the narrator itself. But willow tree tries to remind them even good events as well.

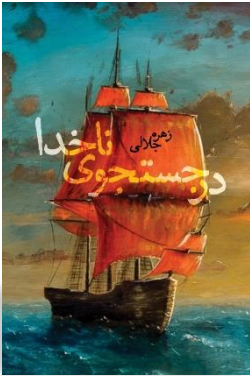

One night, willow tree wants narrator to come to it while he/she is dreaming. Narrator is shocked by this but he/she accepts. Willow tree talks to him/her and this process continues until the narrator gets better mental attitude toward things.

Then, in later parts of the book, willow tree comes to narrator in his/her dreams and always wants him/her to visit it in the park. Gradually the narrator is changing. He/she gets out of his/her dark world and finally is able to see all that beauty around....

Group.

In her novel, Iranian writer Zohreh Jalali tries to show some of these mental problems of human society especially in our times.

Book About:

It is a small book encompassing diverse questions (mostly modern ones), which pertain to the prevailing classic concept of "love".

Being a controversial issue, love is considered to be at the core of all interpretations in literature all over the world.

In this book, the author has delineated the nature of love itself, explicating and illustrating plenty of examples.

Resourcing to the various perspectives and views including Sociology, anthropology, psychology and philosophy.

In fact, the author has broached the subject of love proposing different intrinsic and basic questions on the nature of "love" itself.

Is there any relation between the erotic love and the real love? Is terrestrial love against the "salvation"?

Does it avoid salvation?

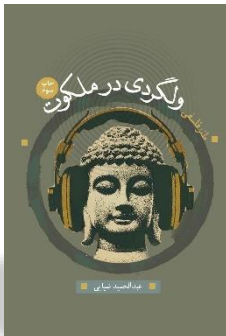

Does love exist at all? Or we only might gain a kind of ' situation/ condition for love rather than love itself?
